Rev. W. J. Suckow, pastor of the Congregational church at Lamar, Mo., will conduct the services at the A. T. Still Infirmary on next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. His subject will be "Cheerfulness as a Medicine." He delivered a very fine lecture last week on the subject of "Fools," that shows the remarkable ability of the man, and all who go will be interested and benefitted.

Arthur, a son of James Rowan, of Sperry, has been lying at the point of death, on account of an injury received in an inaccountable way. Last Thursday night he was in the barn, bedding down the horses when he was either struck on the temple by a heavy instrument or kicked by a horse. His skull was fractured but he managed to crawl to the house, since which he has been unconscious most of the time. In his occasional conscious intervals he is very positive in his assertion that he was struck by a man and not kicked by a horse. The shape of the injury on his skull is that of a blow from a blunt instrument rather than the print of a hoof.

Things that Have Been Overlooked.

Ed. GRAPHIC:

While the representatives of our town have been prompt enough in building walks from the business part of town to the Still infirmary it seems they never take into consideration the fact that many who come to that institution are not able to walk that distance, and the necessity of making any further improvements in that neighborhood has been overlooked. It seems to be very important that some of the people get boarding places as near the infirmary as circumstances will permit, and the walks they travel over be as smooth as possible. Our attention has been called to this matter by seeing some very infirm persons traveling in that neighborhood over one of the worst looking traps (called by some a sidewalk) we have seen for years.

It appears to us that no town can afford to take such risks, for if an unfortunate person should get injured in passing over a walk like that, what could a town set up in defense? It could not plead they ought to have traveled on a better walk for there was none better in that neighborhood. It could not claim that the walk was under construction, for a walk had been ordered and partly made more than a year previous to that time. It would not do to claim the lives of such people are worth nothing, for that would be an insult to humanity, and almost any jury would increase the damages on that account. We do not insist upon the town overdoing anything—but we do insist upon it not undertaking anything it cannot have done promptly.

A Sufferer Cured

"Every season, from the time I was two years old, I suffered dreadfully from erysipelas, which kept growing worse until my hands were almost useless. The bones softened so that they would bend, and several of my fingers are now crooked from this cause. On my hand I carry large scars, which, but for
